While at this work he inadvertently spilled some of the fluid, and it caught free from a lamp. There was an explosion and the blazing benzine was scattered in all directions.

Fisher's clothing caught fire, and the benzine ran-down on the carpet and burned his feet. His wife tore the burning clothes from him, and the fire was txinguished in a few minutes.

Fisher was so bally burned that he has removed to St. John's Hospital. The doctors say he will recover. The furniture was only slightly damaged.

The tug and its tow had scarcely gotten into the stream when the former was signalled to slow up by the ferry-boat Mauch Chunk, which was leaving the slip at the foot of Moore street.

Capt. Seeley obeyed the signal, and the Mauch Chunk went directly across the tug's bow. The ferry-boat had just passed, when the Maryland, under full head of steam, came down upon the tug and canal-boat. It was too late to avert the accident, and despite the fact that the captain of the Maryland signalled the engineer to reverse the engines she ran squarely into the canal-boat, striking the craft amidships.

A hole nearly ten feet long was stove in the side of the McMahon, and she began to sink immediately. The accident occurred about forty yards out from the dock. Capt. Seeley immediately steered the tug alongside the boat and took off the two men from the canal-boat.

Papers were filed to-day in an action brought in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, by Lawyer Stephen M. Hove to have the marriage of Frances E. Schuster to Jacob E. M. Schuster annulled. The action is brought on the ground lived together as man and wife. Mrs. Schuster is now living at 1069 De Kalb avenue. She was the daughter of "Tony" Barslow, a well-known charfather. The senior Barslow was a memand a prominent Wall street broker up of the family now live in the Margaret Miss Barslow was married to Schuster old. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. John E. Barton, and the affair the Rev. John E. Harton, and the affair was kept quiet for several years. In fact, most of the plaintiff's friends will first learn of the marriage when they read of the action for its annulment.

It is stated that a lawyer was buslly engaged for three weeks in drawing up a complaint that would cover the facts without disclosing matters which the plaintiff decided to keep secret, but which will come out at the trial. The complaint is shorter than is usual in divorce proceedings, containing only about 100 words.

About two years ago the plaintiff for the first time realized that she had taken a step that would last a lifetime. Schuster was away at the time, and when a young man offered her his hand in marriage, not knowing that she was already riage, not knowing tout she was already a wife, matters became complicated. Since then Mrs. Schuster has been trying to find her husband and get his consent to an action for the annulment of the marriage.
